Wounded Heroes Hunting Camp (WHHC) is dedicated to helping wounded combat veterans heal and to thanking them for their service. They accomplish this mission by providing wounded veterans with outdoor hunting and fishing adventures. These fully funded adventures challenge our veterans, empower them, and enable them to do the activities they love.

The Wounded Heroes Hunting Camp was founded in 2012 by Jeremy Harbaugh and Zachary Bower. Jeremy is a commissioned officer in the U.S. Marine Corps and Zachary is an avid outdoorsman. They grew up hunting and fishing together and wanted to give back to our wounded service members. They believe that our Wounded Heroes can find a passion for the outdoors that will help them overcome their injuries by uniting them with fellow service members who understand their struggles. Although WHHC's primary focus is supporting wounded veterans they gear all of their outdoor adventures to include their children as well. They understand that their time with their children has been limited due to their service therefore; they invite their children to join them on the hunts.

The WHHC has held events in Delaware, Ohio, Illinois, Maryland, Montana, Pennsylvania, Washington, and even Canada. On their events, they unite our Wounded Heroes with fellow wounded veterans and provide them the tools they need to enjoy the outdoors. The WHHC is proud to be an all-volunteer organization since their inception.
